

MRS. CARMAN A STATUE; JURY QUICKLY FOUND

Placidity of Woman on Trial for Murder Dominates
the Court Room.

MEN OF MIDDLE AGE
TO RETURN VERDICT

JURORS TO TRY MRS. CARMAN.

1. ROBERT F. LUDLAM, oysterman of Oyster Bay, L. I., foreman.
2. ADAM ANGLER, barber, Central Park, L. I.
3. FRANK D. MOUNT, builder, Ocean-side, L. I.
4. WILLIAM D. HOOVER, salesman, Woodmere, L. I.
5. MAX GOTTSCHKE, gardener, New Hyde Park, L. I.
6. ADAM W. SMITH, painter, Cedarhurst, L. I.
7. JAMES V. GIBAUD, gardener, Merrick, L. I.
8. JACOB ANTON, retired, Mineola.
9. JOHN H. MOLINEAUX, Port Washington.
10. JOSEPH H. ASTON, manager, Port Washington.
11. EDWARD E. CARPENTER, contractor, Port Washington.
12. CHARLES E. STRICKER, a florist, of Floral Park.

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 19.—The Mrs. Florence Carman who went on trial in the Supreme Court here to-day for her life, charged with the murder of Mrs. Lulu Bailey at Freeport last June, was as placid and as composed as the whole proceedings as if the court room had been a church bazaar or a sewing bee. Every one spoke of it. No one could help but notice it. And this attitude of mind, if it was a pose, she maintained with unbroken serenity during an entire morning and afternoon session while attorneys in the case fought and wrangled and at last agreed on twelve men for the jury.

There were no verbal pyrotechnics from either of the lawyers. There was nothing to make the spectators crane their necks or sit on the edge of their chairs. In fact, there was just about as much punch and snap to the entire proceedings as there usually is to a cut and dried bankruptcy case.

Dominates the Situation.

And if anything it was Mrs. Carman herself who created this atmosphere of calm which at times all but amounted to boredom. Her unconcern, her perfect lack of agitation seemed to pervade the whole court room.

When the District Attorney spoke of the electric chair she smiled; when mention was made of the fact that a woman had been murdered in cold blood and that the people of the State of New York demand justice she sat motionless and collected; even when the placing of a photograph—a mechanical apparatus for "savesdropping," as her attorney called it—in her husband's office was brought up she sat easily in her chair, the muscles of her face perfectly relaxed and the expression of her eyes mild as if almost anything in the world were going on except the selection of twelve men to decide her guilt or innocence.

The personality of the jurymen, the reactions of the lawyers as it was occasionally disclosed, the simmering expressions of the spectators—everything was subdued and made secondary to the remarkable composure of the woman herself. And in the same way everything went to accentuate the peculiar composure of the woman's personality over the entire case. Even the mystery of the murder, even the obviously sensational circumstances surrounding it were forgotten in the face of Mrs. Carman, until the mere questioning and heckling of talesmen became a humdrum affair of burdensome necessity that seemed to make every one impatient.

Psychological Lethargy.

Perhaps it was that the outward indifference of Mrs. Carman, that by her quiet, planned or psychology worked way into the minds of the lawyers themselves and seemed to inspire them with a lethargy toward the business at hand which made the observer wonder if either lawyer considered it a matter of importance what twelve men out of a vast county were chosen so that twelve were chosen and the proceedings dismissed.

The questions put to them, the talesmen, were ordinary and of very limited range. Only forty men were examined in all. Eleven of these were dismissed by peremptory challenge from the prosecution and three by peremptory challenge from the defense.

All of these instances were cases where the talesman in question revealed an inclination to presuppose guilt or innocence on Mrs. Carman's part. The rest were dismissed easily because they expressed a prejudice in the practice of capital punishment or because of an avowed friendship with the Carman or the District Attorney.

Half an hour before the court had been called to convene, at 9.30 o'clock, the room was crowded and the gold badge constables in the corridor outside were passing back a mob of the idle curious.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The Petit Parisien says the French Yellow Book dealing with the events preceding the war, now being edited by M. Delasse, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, for publication on November 1, will be a document "of staggering political importance."

The Yellow Book was to have appeared sooner but the Government decided to have it printed in several languages besides French in view of its vital importance so that the people of neutral countries may better appreciate it. The delay has been caused by the necessity of having the translations made.

Parisians Cheer Belgian Soldiers

Antwerp's Defenders in Tattered Uniforms, Arouse Enthusiasm of French Capital.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Seldom has a scene of enthusiasm been witnessed in Paris to parallel that of this morning, when a detachment of Belgian soldiers who took part in the defence of Antwerp paraded through the streets of the city on the way from one railroad station to another.

The heroic defenders in their tattered uniforms marched through lines of cheering and enthusiastic citizens who struggled to do them honor. At every step the Parisians insisted upon shaking hands with them and thrusting cigarettes and food upon them. The Belgians are all anxious to return to the battle line. They were taken from Antwerp on transports and landed in southern France, whence they were brought to Paris.

One of them told of an incident of the defence of Antwerp when his regiment was defending the River Nethe. Several severe attacks had been repelled when the Belgians were delighted to see what they supposed to be reinforcements approaching. They were greatly deceived, however, for at a distance of 200 yards the newcomers opened fire upon them, killing thirty. They were German soldiers who had dressed themselves in Belgian uniforms found at Liege, where a stock sufficient to clothe several legions was found.

VOGEL, ACCUSED IN SIEGEL CRASH, DIES SUDDENLY

End Comes at Biltmore on Eve of Trial After Many Indictments.

AUTOPSY TO-DAY TO PREVENT "MYSTERY"

Frank E. Vogel, business associate of Henry Siegel in the ill-fated Siegel enterprises, who was soon to have come to trial on indictments growing out of his business methods, died suddenly at the Hotel Biltmore last evening.

His private physician and Coroner Heilenstein said last night that death was due to heart trouble, caused by arterio sclerosis, from which he had been a sufferer for fifteen years, but an autopsy will be held this morning at the suggestion of the family, it was announced, in order to clear up all doubt.

Mr. Vogel, Mrs. Vogel, their seven-year-old daughter and their twelve-year-old son Frank arrived at the Biltmore yesterday afternoon from Briarcliff Manor. The family was to remain at the hotel until after the trial of the husband and father, which was to begin at Genesee, N. Y., on November 9. They had spent the summer at Briarcliff.

According to Mrs. Vogel's statement, as given out by Dr. Edwin Sternberger some hours afterward, Mr. Vogel went for a walk soon after they were installed in their suite and returned shortly after 5 o'clock. He complained of feeling tired and ill and entering a bedroom adjoining the sitting room sat down on the bed.

Does Not Answer Wife.
"Let me make you a cup of tea," the wife suggested. "That will make you feel stronger."

"Yes, that will help me," was the reply. A moment later Mrs. Vogel called: "What kind of tea do you want?" She received no answer and hearing a gurgling noise hurried into the room to find that her husband had slipped to the floor unconscious.

As her husband had long been an invalid Mrs. Vogel immediately called Dr. Sternberger on the telephone. He was Mr. Vogel's personal physician. The doctor lives near by, at 42 East Fortieth street. He said last night that eleven minutes later he was in the room. With him then was Dr. Foote, the house physician. Both physicians needed only a glance to know that the man was past all human aid.

"Mr. Vogel was a sufferer from arterio sclerosis for the last fifteen years, during which he suffered some very severe heart attacks," said Dr. Sternberger later. "Luckily, I was always within reach and was able to pull him through. It was impossible to get there in time to-day. He was operated on by Dr. William Mayo for stomach trouble about five years ago. The operation did not remove the trouble. The hotel management immediately informed the Coroner's office, but it was several hours before any person would admit the identity of the man who had died. When the name Vogel became known no one at the hotel would confirm the report that it was the former associate of the merchant whose business career was capped by indictments charging grand larceny and other things. The Coroner himself finally admitted the identity and then added that the body was to be taken to an undertaker's shop, where the autopsy will be performed this morning."

"Will Settle All Mystery."

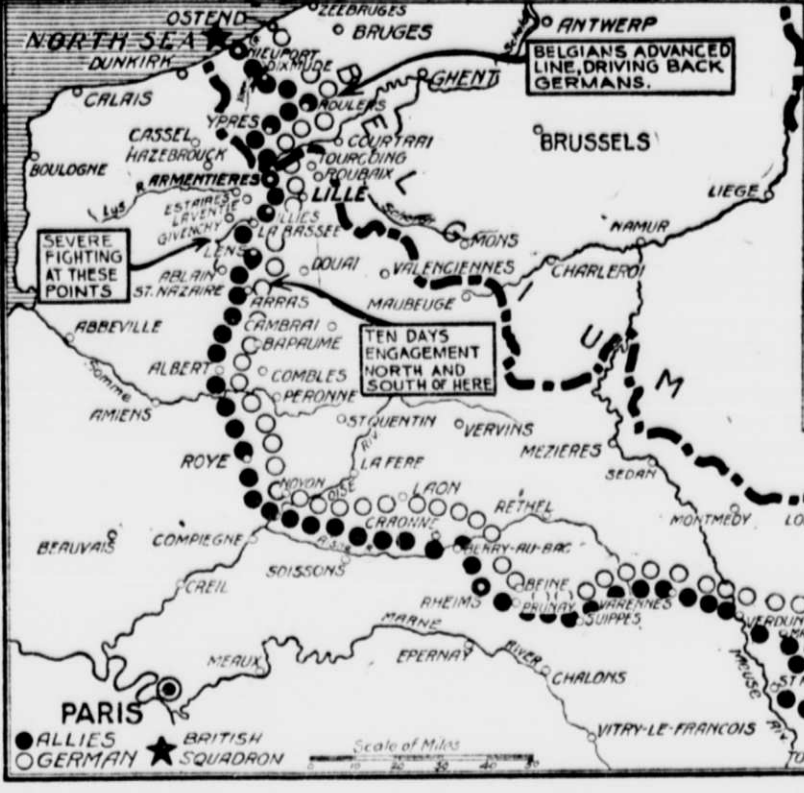

"It is the best thing to do," said the Coroner. "It will settle all mystery. The family made the suggestion that it be done."

Henry Siegel appeared at the hotel late in the evening and went to the apartments. When he returned he declined to say a word.

"There does not appear to be any remote chance that Mr. Vogel's death was due to other than natural causes," said Dr. Lehane afterward. "I am satisfied to take the word of Dr. Sternberger, but it will be best to perform the autopsy."

Seated in a chair, his hands gripping the arms to keep himself upright, one

ALLIES RETAKE OSTEND, LONDON HEARS; BRITISH WARSHIPS SHELL GERMAN LINE; VON KLUCK IS REPORTED IN DIRE PERIL

THE accompanying map shows the present battle line, which now extends from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier, a distance of about 350 miles. The greatest activity is in the west. Severe engagements are reported on the line from La Bassée to Albain-St. Nazaire.

Denial of German Defeats in Northern France Made in Berlin.

LONDON, Oct. 19. — A "Morning Post's" special correspondent in "North France" says he is informed on excellent authority that the allies have retaken Ostend.

There is no confirmation here of this report.

A correspondent of the "Daily Express" telegraphing from France says:

"Gen. von Kluck's attempts to break the enveloping movement of Gen. Joffre have failed. His position is now one of the greatest danger. Part of von Kluck's army is facing roughly east and west, while another part is facing north and south. His lines of communication through Belgium are partly cut, and he must either surrender or retreat on the line prepared by the Belgians."

WARSHIPS JOIN FIGHT.

British Fleet Gives Aid to Belgian Army.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—British warships off the coast of Belgium shelled the German line near Nieuport to-day and aided the Belgians in driving the Germans northward from Roulers.

The Kaiser's plan to seize the French seacoast has met with a decided check. The guns of British warships supporting the Belgian army and the French marines have compelled the Germans to retreat from eight to ten miles.

The official news that a British squadron now composes the extreme left wing of the allied force and has already made itself powerfully felt is a totally new development of the war. The long range guns of the ships are holding the Germans back from the seacoast, nullifying the occupation of Ostend and forcing the Germans to give battle on ground chosen by Gen. Joffre.

The commander in chief reports to-night that the Belgian army splendidly distinguished itself in the day's fighting, moving northward from the River Ypres despite cannonading by the heavy guns of the Germans to Roulers and standing impregnable on a greatly advanced battle line. There is a credible report that the British have sent light draught torpedo boats and gunboats into the canals of the region of Nieuport and that these are cooperating with the land force.

In France the northern section of the left wing of the allies is advancing toward Lille, the Germans giving way but fighting desperately. Gen. Joffre describes the fighting in two towns in this region as a "house to house advance." There is an unofficial report that the Germans have evacuated Lille, unable to hold the city after Arrmentiers were retaken by the allies.

Southward, in the region of Arras and toward Roye, the battle has taken on new violence. The Government reports shows that the allies are slowly driving the Germans from other intrenchments and have carried the fighting to the barbed wire defences. In this quarter the allies press forward with unimpaired confidence after nearly two weeks of night and day fighting. Further southward, toward the "hinge" of the line, the Germans made a new

Arms for Turks Held by Bucharest Government
Despite German Protest.

GREEK PATRIARCH IS TOLD TO LEAVE TURKEY

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.
LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Berliner Tageblatt, according to a despatch from Copenhagen, publishes the following despatch from Bucharest:

"Evidently a big Russian-Turkish naval battle has taken place in the Black Sea. Exceedingly heavy firing of long duration, has been heard on the Rumanian coast. This adds to the general anxiety in Bucharest. The very difficult political situation of Rumania is becoming more complicated."

The Bucharest correspondent of Vorwarts sends word that King Ferdinand at a Cabinet council stated that at present there is no reason for Rumania to change her attitude.

STOPS ARMS FOR TURKS.

Rumania Defers Germany's Her Entrance into War Imminent.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

ROME, Oct. 19.—The explosion in the Near East which will bring Rumania and Turkey into the war of the nations is expected within the week. Official steps taken to-day and yesterday by the Governments of Germany and Turkey on the one hand and the Governments of Russia, Rumania and Great Britain on the other point unmistakably to the entrance of at least two more nations into the conflict, with Italy perhaps ready to abandon her attitude of neutrality.

Coupled with the significant news that the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople has removed the embassy archives from Constantinople to Odessa comes the news that Rumania has seized and holds, despite the protests of the German envoy, a trainload of artillery and ammunition passing through Rumania on the way from Germany to Turkey.

The action of the Russian Ambassador is taken here to mean that Russia comprehends the designs of Turkey and understands that Turkey has merely delayed a declaration of war until Germany can provide her with heavy guns, ammunition, officers and complete the training of the Turkish armies. The removal of the embassy archives to Odessa seems in itself to be an admission by Russia that war is certain to come.

The sudden, rather dramatic, course taken by the Government of Rumania in seizing a trainload of Turkish military property answers a question which has been eagerly discussed by Italian politicians, whether or not the new King of Rumania will depart from the neutral and pacific policy of the late King Charles, whose connection with and friendship for the Hohenzollern family so incensed the Rumanian people. It now seems positive that King Ferdinand will not make the mistake of his uncle in

SAW CRUISERS BATTLE.

U. S. Schooner Witnessed Fight Between German and British ships.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

HAVANA, Oct. 19.—The Fannie Prescott, an American schooner which arrived here to-day, reports that last Saturday she saw a German cruiser fighting with a British cruiser of somewhat smaller size. The German vessel is thought to be the Karlsruhe. The fight, according to the Fannie Prescott, was in latitude 24 degrees 40 minutes north and longitude 84 degrees 20 minutes west. This is in the Gulf of Mexico, about eighty miles west of Key West.

After a half hour of fighting the vessels sailed in opposite directions, neither of them being apparently willing to continue the battle. The Fannie Prescott reports that the German ship listed heavily to port, apparently as a result of serious damage. The British cruiser, he said, gave no signs of injury.

The surgeon says the prisoner maintained his arrogance to the end.

BERLIN ADMITS BIG LOSSES.

Whole Battalions Wiped Out,
Casualty Lists Reveal.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The latest lists of casualties published in the German papers clearly indicate that the claims of the British and French troops that they have wiped out whole battalions of Germans is absolutely true, says a despatch to the Daily News from Rotterdam.

Reserve Infantry Regiment No. 17 lost in one battalion 800 men wounded, apart from the dead, and in another battalion of the same regiment 740 were killed at the battle of the Marne.

Reserve Infantry Regiment No. 69 is said to have had unassessable losses, and such words as "unassessable losses" and "tremendous number of dead and wounded" follow the names of several regiments.

These phrases are full of significance when it is remembered that the Germans have not hesitated to publish local lists of dead running into six columns.

TO GET SWIMMING COLLARS.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Announcement was made to-day that the Admiralty has decided to equip all sailors with swimming collars, which should result in more of them being saved if compelled to take to the water, since the order was issued forbidding a warship to go to the aid of a stricken vessel.

Both officers and men are to carry the collars with them when they are awake and to keep the device inflated and close at hand when they are asleep.
